

PhD or Research Masters in Community Health

Active Choices Springfield is a new and exciting social support project that aims to promote active and healthy lifestyles for veterans in Transition from Defence. The project is a collaboration between UQ, Gallipoli Medical Research, Springfield industry partners and the Queensland Government.

We are looking for domestic PhD or MPhil students to work closely with our team to co-design, implement and evaluate the program with the veteran community in the Springfield region.

The studentship can be full or part-time and would suit graduates from a range of disciplinary backgrounds. We particularly encourage expressions of interest from health professionals already working in community research and applied practice.

To find out more about the project and studentship, contact the lead investigator:

Associate Professor Nicholas Gilson
n.gilson1@uq.edu.au

SPRINGFIELD
CITY GROUP

health+ wellbeing
Queensland

